ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people contributed to my thesis project. I would like to thank Bill Schneider, my thesis chair, for his dedication and encouragement throughout. Thank you to the members of my committee, Bob Barrows and Ellen Dwyer, for taking the time to work with me. I would like to thank the staff at the Indiana State Archives and the Henry County Historical Society for assisting me in my research.

And finally, I would like to thank my father, Dennis Loofbourrow, for inspiring me to explore the world of epilepsy. His courage and positive outlook on life are truly an inspiration. Thanks Dad.
